BACK PAIN

In the modern world, the human body is subjected to many unnatural stresses and incorrect postures. Standing or sitting for long periods of time, heavy physical work, activities with a hunched back combined with psychological stress at work or in private life take their toll. The consequences are back pain, a tense shoulder and neck area, headaches and limited mobility.

About 70% of 30- to 60-year-olds suffer from the “widespread condition” of (lower) back pain or neck & shoulder complaints. Half of those affected see a connection with their professional activity. Of course, chronic back pain can also be caused by wear, injuries, diseases or inflammations.
